Introduction

Eminem's sitdown interview regarding his teenage years that built his foundations for what he is today.

As a teenager, school would've been expected to be a large part of a developing kid's lifestyle. But not for Eminem, dropping out of school at the ripe age of 17. He came across this after failing 9th grade 3 times, this was also due to the large instability in his home life that he'd later rap about in several of his later songs.

The home life of Eminem, who currently at this time was not named anything close to it, Marshall Mathers would be changing schools 2-3 times a year. His mother was unable to keep a job for more than a few or sometimes several months which made money extremely tight.

Eminem is a man born and developed in hard times, and has been the man to express to millions of people, how he has managed to overcome those times. And to let them know that they are not alone.

THE BEGINNING

In reference to the Movie "8 Mile" starring Eminem in his 2002 movie hit talking about and going over the beginning start to his career in underground rap.

Eminem's career with no doubt began in the mid to late 90s, where he was at the time in the underground rapping for small events. Where he earned the respect of those around him after being an absolute lyrical genius. At first of course, he was not so great, being nicknamed "Rabbit" with the meaning being of course him being a skinny white guy.

Surrounded by the presence of the larger black community who came to the concerts. He had a small crew of friends that he was always around and were the truly only trusted people he had in his life.

Eminem gained a massive amount of respect after defeating a series of opponents who acted as bullies towards himself and his friends, in a series of rap battles. This was a key presentation and the main storyline in the 8 mile movie.

He changed the game by saying everything the opponents had against him, and removing all of their possible ways of attack. Cutting off all possible victories their crew had against him, and then he came back like the slim shady himself and dopped bombs of information not even the opponenents crew knew about their leader. Flat out embarrassing him in front of everyone. The man was so shaken he said nothing and walked out.

THE START OF A CAREER AND ERA

The Real Slim Shady and his birthing of a new era of rap, with the release of "The Real slim Shady" -1999 By Eminem produced alongside Dr Dre.

Eminem met Dr. Dre, a renowned rapper and producer in the United States due to his recognition and dealings from N.W.A and Death Row Records, in 1997. This meet and sit-down only occurred due to Eminem's Manager Jimmy Lovine. Who introduced Dr. Dre to Eminem and showed him his unique talent and potential, that being of course Eminem and his god like status of a freestyle rapper.

Dr. Dre later in 1998 invited Eminem over to his Studio in Los Angeles, California. All he had playing was a short skip of a beat and Eminem within the first 5-10 minutes he said already was in the box busting out tunes without a second thought. And with that being said and done, The Real Slim Shady was born. and the head of a new era has just emerged in the new form of rap and hip-hop.

The song was published on a later date, and turned out to be a huge hit. The song rapidly gained listeners, followers, and spotlight from the world. And soon Eminem had to rack up another song to follow as a close up 2nd to his first song. Which of course he did, and the follow up to My name is, created the 1st Major Album that Eminem released under the title of "The Real slim Shady" which this Album went down in history as probably one of the most recognisable albums, to anyone's ears and changed the whole genre of music yet again. Similar to how N.W.A and The 2pac eras did prior.

The Full album collab of Dre and Eminem

Once Eminem and Dre collab album was complete, it was fully released to the public, and became yet again another massive hit to the music industry. Eminem was gaining so much renown, fame, and popularity he was almost seen as a god of rap at the time due to how rapidly and successful he was off the start, but the real question was... Can he keep it up?

Towards the end of "The real Slim Shady" album we enter the age of 2000s, the crucial point of Eminem's career, an era built on hard times, and the challenges people overcame.

But the completion of the album, also marked the turning point for Eminem's life, it brought this new upright style, something Eminem has never seen nor had before... Wealth. Eminem went out to buy a new Rolex, for the first time ever. He called his manager at the time, his net worth was already surpassing him as a millionaire, and asked if he could afford this?

Eminem to this day continues to dress the way he dresses because it's what he's comfortable with, and believes you shouldn't change the style you wore and had in the struggling time be different from the current times.

THE 2000s

An Era of Greatness & Success

The early to late 2000s, and honestly the entirety of the 2000s itself was most definitely the true colors of Eminem, from struggle and challenge, to greatness and success.

Eminem's biggest hit till this day is the song "Without Me" which was in an album with another large hit, "Lose Yourself" two songs that have branded him to be the rapper he is. A man saved by music and rap, and a world he has begun to forge around his success to help others.

Eminem isn't the typical gangster rapper that is seen by most people singing and rapping to this style of music. In a lot of his fans' eyes, he has hope, and a dream that their paths will turn out someday the way he has. That through hard work and dedication, you can one day gain relief from the stress and hard times that you are living in.

Eminem in the 2000s made numerous albums dedicated to the hardships he has faced throughout his childhood, teenage years, and career as a whole. Most of which is family related and depression based which in relatively a large base of the population could relate to in some way.

People needed a style of music that spread the awareness of troublesome times and success that can be found from the times we count as impossible to escape from. What we needed and asked for was delivered by Eminem. He achieved the needs of his followers and listeners from the beginning, that being to rap from one's emotions and feelings, not act hard and tough. Give the world some advice to fix itself and to have hope. not drag it away.

Eminem hit the deepest point of depression in 2009-2010, attempting his own life because of the struggles he was going through. This of course translated into the actions of his voice and music to spread awareness to the world. To yet again spread hope for those who struggle in life.

His album "Recovery" was the first album released after he was released from the mental institute, and he voiced his problems and spoke the truth to the world. He never once failed to show the world the true him. And with this album so many important topics and life lessons were shown and yet again people were given hope through his music. He ceased to amaze the world for his hardships. His song, "Not Afraid" is in a personal sense to even myself, the creator of this something I can listen to everyday when I feel myself struggling with the hardships in life. A song that even in college I have looked back and listened to so I felt whole again and brought me to realization that everyone is struggling at points in their life but the outcome is what you make it, not what anyone else makes it.

Eminem later released some other very important songs, but in all honesty the truth about Eminem being a Goat is from this era of 2000-2010, where he shared his ideals and hardships with the rest of the world to make them feel... cared about and have hope that things will always change for the better someday if you stay around.

RAP GOD

EMINEM

The “Greatest of All Time”

Eminem, with his even further contributions to rap has without a doubt earned his title, “The GOAT of Rap and Hip-Hop”

In 2013, Eminem added on another title, to him being a GOAT of Rap, and everything after 2013, has just ended almost all arguments from followers and haters alike that he truly is the GOAT. The reasoning behind this, was a song released in 2013 named, “Rap God” where Eminem reached an astonishing, 6.46 words per second in the primary rapping parts of the song, to put that into perspective, the average human can only speak 3-4 words per second clearly, Eminem almost doubles that in certain parts of his song. Just take that into perspective, he speaks almost double the speed of the average human being in a lyrical rhyme that is understandable and soothing to the ear.

Eminem of course being the legend and GOAT that he is toppled even that, the absurd 6.46 words per second. Beaten and almost blown out of the water. In 2020, Eminem did an astonishing, 225 words in 30 seconds. Do the math and you’ll find out that, that is 7.5 words per second. Take that into thought, that is even closer than double almost all the average human beings on this planet.

With these two feats. Eminem has earned himself to be the ruler of rap during the 2000s and 2010s. Knocking out notable figures, and modern day rappers without even a chance of redemption for them. This era, this dominance of the market will never be forgotten.

Current Day

Eminem in his 2020 Interview, on regards to his most recent album that he released.

Eminem in 2021 to 2022 has been quite quiet.

It is true the end of the legendary era is soon coming to an end, Eminem's most recent album was "Music to be murdered by" released in 2020. Even with the amount of hatred for this new album for it being called a huge uproar in music, it still has some of the highest ratings songs of the time.

It even got him the award of having the most gold and platinum level songs by a rapper and singer in general. Which he was rewarded with later that year. The era truly is coming to an end, but there is hope. Eminem always gave us one thing so, let us give hope in him that he will end us all off on a great foot, and give this world the send off he deserves in the music industry.

Superbowl

There are going to be many arguments based off of this statement I will make here. The sendoff of Eminem has finally come, the superbowl to most felt like his final send off along with the generation of music he grew up with and in. Dr. Dre, 50 cent, Snoop Dogg, all members of his generations and key features in his music style and mentorship. Were all also there, those individuals have ended their careers after decades of service to the public and the music industry.

So with that being said, eminem's last song to send off to the public was of course, "Loser yourself" never lose your self to the music, never let pain or struggle cloud your mind, and remember that you will never be alone in times of struggles no matter how much it may seem like it. Hard times create strong men, you just have to remind yourself that.

WHY BE A KING WHEN YOU CAN BE A GOD

Eminem's Story

And that for you all, is the completeion to why Eminem's Story, has added up to make him
this so called "God of Rap and Hip-hop"

Let the arguments go to rest, because there are no longer any valid ones. And let yourself remember the era he created and formed for the future to learn and go off of.

And always remember, "Don't lose yourself"
